Take off Bus Service

The Gary-Hammond to Joliet bus line service which Frankfort enjoyed for one week was ended Saturday night when the bus line ceased running their buses through here. The Gary line started operations a week ago Monday and ran an hourly bus service east and west via the Lincoln Highway. The big Reo coaches having a capacity of 15 persons made the run from Frankfort to Joliet in 35 minutes, beating the interurban car time by ten minutes. The same fare of 50 cents for a single ticket between Frankfort and Joliet was charged. The same rate applied to Chicago Heights from Frankfort. The trip to Chicago Heights was made on the all concrete Lincoln Highway east of here in 20 minutes, which beat the interurban time by 15 minutes.

Auto bus lines can only operate under a State franchise and as the Gary line did not have a franchise but had their application for one pending, the Joliet and Eastern Traction line which operates between Joliet and Chicago Heights got out an injunction order restraining the bus line from further continuance of operation. It is understood that the Chicago and Southern Traction Line operating between Chicago and Kankakee has also got out a restraining order preventing the bus line from operating buses at Thornton.

As far as can be learned now the Interurban will continue to operate through Frankfort, in which event a bus line will not have a chance to operate in competition with the interurban line. In the event that the bus line would have a clean sail and could get in the local field right away.

Frankfort had excellent transportation which it lacked, as they could travel to Chicago Heights or Joliet either by bus or interurban.

Home Improvement club will meet at the home of Mrs. George Mitchell, Thursday at 2 p. m., February 16th.

Dralle-Lankenau Nuptials

A pretty wedding was solemnized on February 1st when Miss Amanda Lankenau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lankenau, became the bride of Mr. Edwin Dralle, son of Mrs. M. Dralle of Peotone. The Rev. G. Lambrecht, pastor of St. Peter's Evangelical church officiated, reading the double ring ceremony.

The day also marked the 28th wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

Miss Ella Lankenau, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and Richard Oetter as best man.

The bride's gown was of white canton crepe and she wore a bridal veil of tulle. Her flowers were bride's roses and sweet peas, arranged in a shower-boquet. A gown of orchid canton crepe was worn by the honored maid, and she carried a bouquet of sweet peas of lavender shade.

A reception and wedding dinner following the ceremony at the home of the bride. Decorations were in pink and white, and sweet peas were used throughout the rooms. The colors were also effected in the menu.

Miss Beulah Lankenau and Miss Leona Heiland served at the tables.

After a wedding trip the young couple will reside on the Dralle homestead in Andres.

Three weeks ago, a man calling himself Mr. Redman, visited Frankfort and collected subscriptions for a mission in Chicago. This man we find is a fraud. People are warned not to give money to such solicitors, but to insist on investigating his right to collect funds.

Sheriff Suggests

Deputies Be Appointed

Sheriff Newkirk has made a suggestion that the townships of the county should have special deputies to be subject to call duty and be paid by the county for the purpose of arresting moonshiners, bootleggers, and auto thieves. He has suggested that eight such deputies should be appointed for Frankfort and four for Mokena. Whether anything will come of this suggestion is not decided.

Fire at Mokena School

The Mokena Public school was the scene of a fire Monday afternoon when the floor on the upstairs room caught fire from an overheated furnace stove. It is said that hot ashes in the ash pit caused the concrete under the pan to become heated which in turn set fire to the woodwork. The children were sent out of school quietly when wisps of smoke were seen coming up from underneath the furnace stove. Many of the youngsters were not aware that there was a fire until they got outdoors. The flooring was torn up and the fire extinguished before it had a chance to make any further headway.

Milk Producers Select

Delegates; Elect Officers

The attendance at the Milk Producers meeting held at Mokena on February 6th was poor. The following delegates to the annual Chicago meeting were elected: C. Bornet, Willard Owen and John Baumgartner.

A Will County Milk Producers meeting was held in Crete on Tuesday and was well attended. At this meeting Mr. Wm. Koelling was elected county president, E. S. Schaefer, secretary, and C. M. Cleveland, treasurer.

Mokena Girl Sues Sister

An ivory set was the bone of contention in a law suit heard before Police Magistrate John F. Schultz at Mokena village hall Saturday night. Miss Agnes Frisch instituted suit against her sister, Mrs. James Rafau, charging that she had given the latter the privilege of buying merchandise on her charge account at Mandel Bros. store in Chicago and that Mrs. Rafau had made purchases to the extent of $30 and that she had not been reimbursed for this amount. Mrs. Rafau contended she had paid her sister.

In the meantime Miss Frisch, through Magistrate Schultz, got out an attachment writ on January 23d on an ivory set which was left at her home by her sister, Mrs. James Rafau. Mrs. Rafau secured a replevin writ from the office of Justice McCulloch in Joliet, but when an officer came to serve this writ he found that the attachment writ had been issued just the day before and his writ was void.

Magistrate Schultz held court at the village hall Saturday night at six o'clock. The plaintiff, Miss Frisch, was present, but the defendant did not appear, but her husband appeared in her stead. After going over the case and hearing the evidence Magistrate Schultz decided the case in favor of Miss Frisch. Following the payment of the court costs by the defendant, the case was then settled between the two disputing parties.

NEW STORE KEEPER MOVES IN

Walter Fisher and family of Joliet moved into the former Groth building Friday. Mr. Fisher is the new store keeper who has purchased the former Grogan Cash and Carry Store. Mr. Fisher is putting in a nice line of goods and is offering many bargains. Watch for his display advs. which will appear in the News-Bulletin each week. You can save money by watching for his advertised bargains.

LEAVE FOR CHICAGO

The John Grogan family left for Chicago Friday night. A big delegation of friends were at the depot to "see them off." A crowd of youngsters chattered the Grogan youngsters as their means of expressing their farewell wishes. The Grogan family is residing in a furnished flat at Normal Park. They like their new surroundings but the children are homesome for their old time playmates here.

MOKENA POST OFFICE IN LIMELIGHT AGAIN

As the result of the Grogan family moving to Chicago the Mokena post office will have to have a new post master and the date for a civil service examination will be announced soon. Mrs. Grogan will not be able to delegate her powers as post master to Mr. Fisher as was stated in the News-Bulletin last week. She has to come here every other day to superintend the post office until the new post master is secured. The Mokena post office is now in the third class and is a salaried office, which makes it worth while going after. As a result it is understood that a host of applicants will be heard from when the time for examination comes.

TO HOLD EVENING SERVICES

The Mokena M. E. church is making plans for a change in their hours of worship. Heretofore preaching services have been held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Elmer Palmer announced Sunday that beginning with Sunday, February 19th services will be held at 7:30 o'clock and will continue so until further notice. The change is being made as the result of a request of the members of the congregation who feel that evening services will prove more profitable in way of attendance than afternoon services.

FATHERS' AND SONS' BANQUET

A most unique social affair wholly out of the ordinary is the Fathers' and Sons' Banquet to be held at the M. E. church under the auspices of the M. E. Sunday school, on Tuesday evening, February 21st. Rev. T. K. Gale of Joliet, District Superintendent will be present and take part in the elaborate program which is now in the process of formation.

Miss Marcia Liess is the new teacher of the class of Miss Muriel Hacker at the M. E. Sunday school, since Miss Hacker has taken up a nurse training course at Silver Cross hospital, Joliet.

VERY ILL

Miss Minnie Eggers who has been very ill the past year, is still in a serious condition. Albert Hodell remains very critically ill.

ENTERTAINING CLASS

Miss Cora McGovney entertained the members of the "Ever Faithful" Sunday school class of the M. E. church at her home Wednesday evening. A good time was enjoyed.

New Lenox is all agog over the announcement which has been made by A. C. Isenhoff, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company pole yards at Brisbane, that a $100,000 creosoting plant will be installed by his company at Brisbane by May first of this year. The new plant will be large enough to handle all creosote treating of poles for this part of the country. More land will also be purchased, Mr. Isenhoff said, to provide room for the increase in activities at the yard. Mr. Isenhoff has been manager of the yard mentioned for fifteen years.

ST. MARY'S RE-DECORATED

The St. Mary Catholic church has been greatly beautified in the interior by being newly decorated and new electric lights being installed. The church presents a very handsome appearance now.

News-Bulletin Adds New Field

The News-Bulletin is getting to be the popular paper of the community, and this week has been a very fine indication of this statement by the way new subscriptions have rolled in from Worth, Palos Park, Chicago Ridge, Tinley Park and Joliet routes. The News-Bulletin is proud to say that it is working up a good subscription list in Worth and adjoining towns and will carry items of news from this section. Harry Daniels is in charge of getting subscriptions in this territory and paid a visit to the News-Bulletin office Tuesday with a fine bunch of brand new subscriptions. The News-Bulletin is going to print all the worth-while news from these communities and will do everything in its power to merit the fine support which is being accorded it now. The News-Bulletin is not only a newspaper, but a part of the community in which it circulates. Everyone is urged to send in the good live news of the community and thus help in making the News-Bulletin still better and more interesting.

The News-Bulletin carries many exclusive items of news not found in any other paper. The story about the oil boom at Worth was reported exclusively in the News-Bulletin. This week we have a number of exclusive items as the proposed new concrete tributary highways to the Lincoln Highway, the suggestion of the sheriff of Will County that special deputies be employed to arrest moonshiners, bootleggers, auto thieves, etc., in Frankfort township, and the restraining order issued against the Gary-Hammond bus line restraining them from operating an auto bus line from Chicago Heights to Joliet over the Lincoln Highway as they did for one week. The News-Bulletin is only $1.25 a year, which price is in the means of anyone, and it carries besides the home news, many special features in the ready print service as furnished by the Western Newspaper Union, one of the largest news agencies in the country. The serial stories, woman's fashion page, Boy Scout column, and dozens of other features, are all included in the subscription price, besides oceans of bargains offered in the advertisements of the stores of Joliet and those of the local community. "Seen and Heard," by Andy Dabs a local humorist, are sure gloom chasers and a regular weekly feature of this paper. In the News-Bulletin the farmer finds listed all the sale dates of the community as well as the sale advs. of the various auctions. In fact, the News-Bulletin holds something of interest for everyone. If not a subscriber, get on our list at once and get a real live country weekly paper. If a subscriber and your subscription has expired, we urge you to renew.

TINLEY PARK WOMAN INJURED

Mrs. Harold Burke met with a very serious accident Saturday night. She had returned to Tinley Park on the midnight train and while walking toward her home in the west end of the village she slipped on an icy walk and broke her leg. She called for help but it appears no one heard her cries and she lay helpless in the biting cold until 2 o'clock in the morning when Norman Wyman and another young man were coming home in their car. Mrs. Burke called as loud as she could when she heard the car coming and attracted Mr. Wyman's attention, who then stopped and took her home in his car. Mrs. Burke has been working in one of the department stores in Chicago while her husband has been out of work. There are also two small children in the family. Mrs. Burke is getting along as well as can be expected following her terrible ordeal.

NEW DOCTOR IN TOWN

Dr. W. C. Van Woermer of Springfield, Ill., has moved into the former Dr. Snider place. His household and office goods arrived by car on the Rock Island Tuesday morning. Tinley Park now has two physicians, so the people here ought to keep well.

The government will receive sealed proposals for a mail messenger service between the Rock Island depot and the local post office. This means that the messenger would have to deliver mail to and from all trains. Postmaster C. Andres will receive such sealed proposals until Feb. 13.

GENERAL NEWS NOTES

News has reached Tinley Park that a baker has been here looking over the local field with a view of opening up a home bakery here. Fine business it is true, for the more trade in town the better for the town.

Postmaster C. Andres is ill with a very bad cold and confined to his home.

Mrs. Henry Kammert visited with Mokena friends Sunday.

Mrs. George Schreiber entertained a number of friends and relatives Tuesday evening in honor of her birthday anniversary. A jolly good time is reported.

The editor in the handling of the news of a community inadvertently steps on somebody's toes as was the case of the News-Bulletin last week when the write-up about the Mokena moonshine case appeared and in which Tinley Park was mentioned. Some of our good Tinley friends feel aggrieved and say "It was a h— of a piece" to put in the paper. The item in question was not intended to reflect on Tinley Park in any manner and there is no reason why anyone should get sore because "the fur was rubbed on the wrong side this time," when it is to be remembered that the News-Bulletin has boosted more for Tinley Park and its interests than any other paper in the country, and we challenge anyone to deny this statement. Whenever any public affairs or social affairs have merited a boost the News-Bulletin has been right there to give it.

We do not want anyone to hold any ill feeling on account of the incident referred to, and as no harm has been done, the matter is of no consequence. Of course sometimes it is best to leave some things unsaid, but when the editor does say something that someone else wishes to keep suppressed it is no sign that the editor is knocking anyone, as oftentimes in the hurry of collecting and editing news matter these things are not analyzed as closely as they should be.

ORLAND COUPLE HAS BIG TIME

Harry Rausch and Martha Brash were quietly married one day this week but somehow the boys in the neighborhood found it out and had the time of their life. When they went to charivari them they found no one home, so the boys went in the house and made themselves at home. They played cards for a while and then they became hungry, so one of the gang found the pantry and some "eats". They made coffee and had lunch. By this time the bride's father, Henry Brash, heard the noise and came down stairs to investigate. He told them the young couple had been in bed some time before they arrived. Then the fun began. Flashlights were shot through the window to make sure the couple was there. Sure enough, they were. So tin cans, bells, shot guns, etc., were kept in time for about half an hour, but no one came out, so the window was pried open and the curtain raised—then it was moving day for the gang; they went away without getting anything.

DUTY WELL DONE

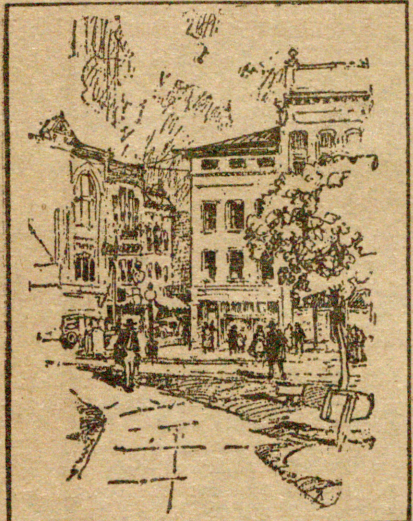

Springfield Citizens Worthily
Honored Lincoln's Memory.

Writer Who Knew the Great President
Commends Placing of Tablets at Points of Interest.

Springfield citizens have discharged a duty which the nation has owed to future generations. They have recalled the memory of Abraham Lincoln's life in Springfield by placing thirteen bronze tablets at places made historic by events in Lincoln's career while he resided there, writes Henry B. Rankin in the New York Tribune.

These tablets bear his name and tell of the events that transpired at the various places and dates. The bronze, the designs and the workmanship represent the best quality of memorial art.

To younger citizens who never knew him and to the thousands of visitors who are attracted to Springfield only because it was the home of Lincoln, these tablets will be most revealing of his presence in the Illinois capital. These memorials are a living embodiment of the Lincoln spirit in Springfield and are as appealing and more voiceful than even his tomb. He still lives at Springfield now in daylight as well as at midnight and limited no longer by Lindsay's poetic vision of "Lincoln Walks at Midnight." The poet wrote:

It is portentous and a thing of state
That here at midnight, in our little town,
A mourning figure walks, and will not rest.
Near the old Courthouse pacing up and down.

Some of the locations marked are more intimate than others to the writer, though all are worthy and correctly placed. Four of the tablets mark places and events where I was present and familiar with the events cited. These are the ones at the old Journal office, where Lincoln received the telegram notifying him of his nomination; at the C. M. Smith building, in the third story, where Lincoln wrote his first inaugural address; also the tablet reciting events at the State house (now Court house), where his great speeches were delivered and where his body lay in state and from where it was borne to the tomb. The fourth tablet marks the law office which Lincoln occupied the last seventeen years he was in Springfield. This is to me the most appealing and sacred of all in memory's retrospect.

Lincoln's Law Office.
The first three mentioned I will not further refer to here, as they were fully described in my "Personal Recollections of Abraham Lincoln."

Of the Lincoln law office some more intimate recognition of the part it had in Lincoln's life deserves mention at this time. This office was the center of Lincoln's legal, political and literary activities in Springfield. Volumes might have been written of what took place here, had there been such a competent, gossiping scribe as Boswell always present to take notes of what transpired.

It is now more than sixty years since I passed daily under the swinging sign, "Lincoln & Herndon," and up and down the stairway, into and from a back room, located in what was then a two-story building. This had been the law office of Abraham Lincoln for the last seventeen and most strenuous years he spent in Springfield.

It was my privilege, for several of those later years, to share in that office its routine as a student, and to enjoy the personality and instruction of this most remarkable man of his century.

The end of his presence at the law office came the evening of February 10, 1861. I recall seeing Abraham Lincoln passing that night, for the last time, out of his office and down the narrow stairway to the street. On the following morning he departed from Springfield on his mission into the strange, strenuous sacrificial life that has embalmed his memory forever to endure in the heart of the ages.

Foresaw Coming Events.
No place in Springfield, not even his tomb, throngs with memories such as this office brings to the students of Lincoln's history. Lincoln's most studious years were spent here, as well as the most aspiring ones. It

WRITTEN AT TOMB OF LINCOLN

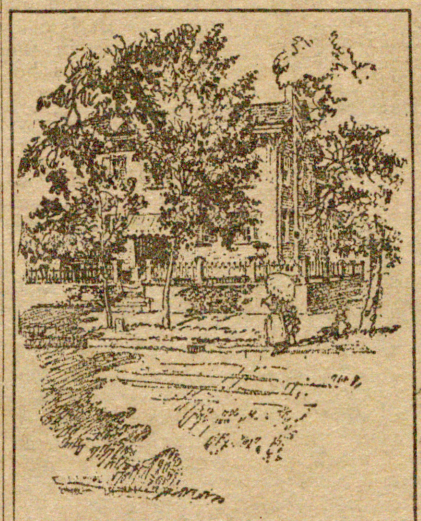

Here idle lies behind this gate,
Where little children and the great
Forget-me-nots and laurel lay,
All the useless, hallowed clay
Of Lincoln, in his lonely state.

A spirit, vast, compassionate,
Unfaltering in a world of hate
Of little men who rage when they Hear idle lies.

Lord, how we silly humans prate
Of life's inconsequential date,
And epoch passes while we pray,
An epic sung while asses bray;
A god went by that we, too late,
Here idolize!

was here that he grew clear visioned on the future's national problems and threw his whole soul into their solution. Here he acquired his dexterous skill in handling human implements. Political events rapidly succeeded each other in those years he spent there. These arose to a climax at length with swift unlooked for by most others. Not so to Lincoln. They culminated at last suddenly, bringing fierce strife of brother against brother, of state against state. Dark clouds filled the political and national skies, bursting at last into a storm of bitter hate and bloody war. This had become inevitable.

When that hour of need had struck it was from this office there came a man fully prepared by years of study for those fateful hours. An honest, tall, gentle, strong man, heroic and sad, who was constitutionally called by his fellow countrymen from this office and placed at the helm of state to preserve our national union. In that time of political turmoil and civil revolution he guided his country safely through blood and fire and tears, with a steady, unshaken faith in God and man.

The Lincoln Home at Eighth and Jackson Streets, Springfield.

Truly "A Man for the Ages."

It was not the opportunity nor the stress of great occasions, such as the delivery of his speech in the Illinois state capital on "a house divided against itself cannot stand," nor the debates with Douglas that followed it, nor the opportunity before a New York audience at Cooper Institute, that account for or explain the progressive development of Lincoln.

It was not Salem, Springfield or Washington; it was neither Stuart, Logan, Herndon, Douglas, Baker, Hardin nor the able men in his cabinet and who surrounded him in so many other capacities, both civil and military; who can have the credit of prominence in the making of Abraham Lincoln, much as those places and some of those men have contributed to it.

After and beyond all these influences and those times and men that he there moved among, and rising beyond all comparisons with them, we clearly discern the unique and exclusive personality of Lincoln himself.

In a letter to the director of public works, the governor called for the preparation of plans, specifications and "a careful detailed estimate" of the cost of the contemplated waterway, expressing the hope that the time is near when it will be practicable to push construction. He urged economy, however, in the contemplated plans.

Sixty-five Illinois cities and villages have adopted the commission form of government since Springfield, the capital city, blazed the trail a little more than ten years ago. Springfield adopted the commission system on January 2, 1911. Moline and Rock Island followed the next day, and sixteen other cities took similar action during the year. Every year since, except 1918, has seen new municipalities added to the list. Under the commission government law of Illinois, the administration is placed in the hands of a council composed of a mayor and four commissioners, each having a department of the city government under his control, the mayor holding the helm. Illinois' sixty-six cities operating under commission government are: Alton, Anna, Aurora, Bloomington, Braceville, Broadwood, Buda, Carbondale, Cairo, Carlin, Centralia, Chenoa, Chicago Heights, Christian, Clinton, Coal City, Collinsville, Crotty, Dallas City, Decatur, Dixon, Downers Grove, Earlville, East St. Louis, Effingham, Elgin, Flora, Forest Park, Gardner, Hamilton, Harrisburg, Harvey, Highland Park, Hillsboro, Hurst, Jerseyville, Joliet, Kewanee, LaSalle, Lincoln, Marion, Marseilles, Moline, Murphysboro, Mount Carmel, Naperville, Newton, Oglesby, Olney, Ottawa, Palos Park, Paris, Pekin, Princeton, Rochelle, Rock Island, South Beloit, Sparta, Springfield, Spring Valley, Sterling, Streator, Tampico, Waukegan, Wheaton. Under the system, the mayor holds no veto power, and as presiding officer of the council has but one vote.

Contrary to the opinion sometimes expressed that corn is not good for horses and mules, the University of Illinois agricultural experiment station has found, as a result of a series of tests recently completed, that sound ear corn properly fed with legume roughages is a healthful and satisfactory feed.

Seven hundred masculine students at the University of Illinois earned over $120,000 during the two semesters last year at odd jobs, according to a report issued by the Young Men's Christian association.

Madison county has let contracts totaling $527,000 for rebuilding several sections of hard roads. The roads are a part of the Illinois state system.

Marango voters at a special election rejected the proposition to issue bonds in the sum of $150,000 for the purpose of building a community high school.

The Illinois State Sportsmen's association held its annual meeting at Aurora and awarded the state championship trap-shooting tournament to Aurora. The tourney will be held on June 13, 14, 15 and 16, it was announced.

The board of supervisors of Logan county voted 14 to 5 to pay for the right of way of the state bond issue hard road through the county from the public funds, going exactly contrary to the board of McLean county, which declined to take this action.

Illinois has more Legion members than any other one state in the United States. This was the announcement of Commander William R. McCauley of the Illinois department at Bloomington upon his return from Indianapolis, Ind., where he attended a conference of Legion leaders from all sections of the country.

The annual state fair will be held one month later than usual this year, it was decided at a conference of those in charge of the exposition. The dates this year are announced as September 16-26, inclusive. The annual fair had for the past several years been held in August, but the later date was agreed upon because it is favored by a majority of exhibitors and horsemen.

The single ballot box will be used at the spring primaries in Illinois. This announcement was made by the secretary of state to clarify the question for county clerks in conducting the primaries in April. Numerous inquiries are being received at the secretary's office from county clerks throughout the state asking if separate ballot boxes must be provided for men and women at the polls.

Members of the Illinois district, United Mine Workers, by a vote of 33,462 to 4,867, favored lending financial aid to the Howat faction of the Kansas miners, according to results of a referendum announced by Frank Farrington, president. The policy of John L. Lewis, international president, in depositing Howat was disapproved by a majority of 31,673 to 5,558. The Illinois state organization claims approximately 90,000 members, almost half of whom voted on the two questions.

Public libraries in Illinois are suffering from lack of sufficient funds, according to the secretary of the Illinois Library Extension commission, in announcing a campaign of publicity on behalf of a minimum annual revenue of $1 per capita of the population of the community served. "Librarians are underpaid and libraries are doing without the books they should have," the secretary says, "because of the low tax rate for libraries in Illinois cities."

New officers of the Illinois Association of Farm Advisers were elected at Champaign as follows: C. C. Logan, Crawford county, president; P. R. Edgerton, Rock Island county, vice president; H. A. De Werff, Kendall county, secretary; Earl Price, Franklin county, treasurer. The following directors were elected: E. H. Walworth, Clark county; Charles Rehling, Madison county; E. R. Ruck, Macoupin county; I. S. Brooks, retiring president, was made delegate to the national convention, which meets at Chicago next December.

Sommer Brothers of Pekin won the state championship for the best ten ears of corn at the University of Illinois corn show, held a few days ago. The single ear championship was won by M. Lasson of Princeton, who showed yellow corn, as did the Sommers. In the sectional championships C. G. Holden of Hillsdale exhibited the best ten ears in the northern half of the state, while Mr. Lasson's entry was declared the best single ear. The southern winners were Sommer Brothers, in the ten-ear class, and E. O. Newkirk of Bowen for a single ear. F. V. Wilson of Edgewood was placed first in the single and ten-ear combined division.

Judge K. M. Landis, arbiter in the dispute between Chicago building trade unions and contractors, has announced a scale of wages for building trades employees practically the same as that prevailing for the last four months. The new scale becomes effective June 1, and remains in effect for one year if accepted by the unions and contractors. The contractors previously had agreed to abide by the award and most of the unions indicated that they would accept the wages fixed by the arbiter. Awards for some of the principal unions made by Justice Landis follow: Plumbers, 95 cents; bricklayers, $1.10; boiler makers, $1; steamfitters, 95 cents; electricians, $1.10; gas fitters, 95 cents; slate and tile roofers, $1; marble setters, 97½ cents; lathers, $1; common laborers, 72½ cents. Carpenters and plasterers, two of the unions failing to agree to the arbitration, would have received $1 and $1.10, respectively, had they been parties to the agreement, he said.

Governor Small announced the appointment of Frank D. Ayres of Chicago as an assistant commerce commissioner. The appointment leaves but one vacancy, one commissioner never having been named since the membership was increased by the legislature last year.

Persons without a reasonable excuse for being on the streets of West Frankfort after 11 p. m. are to be arrested under orders of the police department, which revive an old curfew law. Increased crime was the cause of the orders.

Writes Mrs. Hardee Regarding
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Calif.—"I must tell you that I am a true friend to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken it off and on for twenty years and it has helped me change from a delicate girl to a stout, healthy woman. When I was married I was sick all the time until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in bed much of my time with pains and had to have the doctor every month. One day I found a little book in my yard in Guthrie, Oklahoma, and I read it through and got the medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and took eight bottles and used the Sanative Wash. I at once began to get stronger. I have got many women to take it just by telling them what it has done for me. I have a young sister whom it has helped in the same way it helped me. I want you to know that I am a 'friend indeed,' for you were a 'friend indeed.'"

—Mrs. GEORGE HARDEE, 1043 Byram St., Los Angeles, California.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

BIGGEST THING IN SCOUTING

General Leroy T. Steward of Chicago is one of the original founders of the scout movement, and a staunch believer in all scouting stands for. In a recent interview he said:

"The boy is the man of tomorrow, our coming citizen, with his responsibilities and definite place in the world. You can't fool him, but you can do wonderful things with the right sort of leadership. The spirit of scouting is bigger even than its first-aid and outdoor craft. Getting an active, growing, eating, noisy boy to be thoughtful and do a good turn daily, to want to be helpful to others, to obey its oath and law—that's the biggest thing in scouting and, indeed, in life."

Speaking of his own interest in scouting, the general said:

"I've spent over forty years of my life in various forms of public service—the army, the police department, the postoffice, the boy scouts, and so forth—and am convinced that nowhere can so much real good be done as with our boys. Scouting is the one thing I expect to give my time to for the rest of my life; to help to build boys into good citizens. Can you, or any other grown-up, find greater opportunity, a more genuine service to be rendered than is within the reach of all of you?"

AROUND BOY SCOUT CAMPFIRE

One of the Most Attractive Features of a Boy Scout Camp is the Campfire, Always Started Without a Match.

GOOD TURN RECIPROCATED

When James Caldwell and Clarence Livingholm, Omaha boy scouts, flagged a train last November on discovering a tree on the track, which would undoubtedly have caused a serious wreck, they made light of their action. It was all in the day's work. There was "nothing to it," just a good turn such as all scouts are pledged to. But the railroad officials didn't see it in precisely the same way. They thought there was a good deal to it. So much so, in fact, that out of gratitude to the scouts who rendered them the service they have offered to build a fine new swimming pool at Camp Gifford, the Omaha scout camp. A suitable marker will be erected in the camp mess hall recording the fine good turn of the railroad as well as the facts of the service rendered by the scouts.

ANOTHER SCOUT HERO

Fire broke out in a tenement house in East Fourteenth street, New York city. Frank Catalano, a fourteen-year-old boy scout, was among the crowd that assembled. "I got through the fire line," Frank says, "on the strength of my scout badge. I heard a woman screaming for her baby, who had been left inside. I couldn't stand that. I wiggled through the smoke along the floor and got the baby." That wasn't all he did, however. Having placed the child in its frantic mother's arms he went back into the building and led a woman and two children safely to a fire escape, the stairs being ablaze. He then guided two more adults out of danger and rescued a dog. Then he went on to school. The excitement was over.

DOINGS OF BOY SCOUTS

Camp sites in New Jersey state forests will be opened next season for use of boy scouts according to an announcement of the State Department of Conservation and Development.

Every year the Kennel club of Philadelphia turns over the proceeds of its annual dog show to some cause that they think worth promoting. This last year it was the local boy scouts who were the beneficiary of the club,

DESSERTS FOR A WEEK

Even a plain rice pudding, wholesome and good as it is, may be made a work of art by proper garnishing.

Vanilla Rice Pudding.—Pour three cups of water—over one-half cup of rice, heat to the boiling point and cook five minutes, stirring constantly with a fork. Drain, add two cups of cold water, one-half teaspoonful of salt and cook until the rice is soft. Scald one and one-half cups of milk in a double boiler; mix three tablespoonfuls of cornstarch and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt with one-half cup of cold milk, stir until smooth and add to the scalded milk, stirring constantly; cook and stir until the mixture is thick; cover and cook ten minutes. Beat the yolks of two eggs until light, add one and one-fourth teaspoonfuls of vanilla, turn into a fancy dish and chill. When ready to serve, garnish with whipped cream roses with a bit of bright-colored jelly in the center of each. Press the cream through a pastry bag or a small paper cone.

Yankee Plum Pudding.—Take one cupful of finely-chopped suet, add one cupful of New Orleans molasses, sift three cups of flour with one and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each of cloves, nutmeg and salt; add alternately with one cupful of sweet milk, reserving some of the flour to dredge one cupful of raisins and one cupful of walnut meats broken in bits, mix well and turn into a buttered mold and steam three hours. Serve with an egg sauce. Beat two eggs, add one-half cupful of sugar and when dissolved, add one-half cupful of hot milk and a teaspoonful of grated lemon rind.

Queen of Puddings.—Cut one cupful of toasted bread into one-half-inch cubes, beat the yolks of three eggs and the white of one until thick. Add one-half cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla and two cupfuls of milk. Pour over the bread and bake in a moderate oven, then cover with one cupful of stewed, unsweetened apple and cover with a meringue, using the other whites. Bake until brown.

"Soon as the evening shades prevail, The moon takes up the wondrous tale And nightly to the listening earth Repeats the story of her birth."

SEASONABLE DESSERTS

A pie of any variety except mince is in season all the year, for pie seems to be the great American dessert.

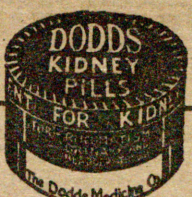

Chocolate Cream Pie.—Melt two squares of chocolate, add one-half cupful of sugar, four teaspoonfuls of cornstarch, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, the yolks of three eggs slightly beaten and two cupfuls of milk, stirring constantly; add one tablespoonful of vanilla and turn into a baked pastry shell. Spread with a meringue and brown in the oven.

Buttered Bread and Raisin Pudding.—Butter slices of bread, removing the crusts, to fill a three-pint baking dish. Arrange in the dish, buttered side down. Sprinkle a thin layer of shredded, seeded raisins between the layers. Cover with four cupfuls of milk to which three slightly beaten eggs have been added, one cupful of brown sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and the rind and juice of a lemon. Bake slowly two hours. Serve with a hard sauce.

Cranberry Pie.—Cream five tablespoonfuls of butter with one-half cupful of brown sugar, and one well-beaten egg and one cupful of flour. Chill and roll out into three rounds and bake. Cook cranberries with three tablespoonfuls of cake crumbs, sugar and water until thick. Cool and spread between the layers. Cover with whipped cream and serve in wedge-shaped pieces.

Dutch Apple Cake.—Sift together two cupfuls of pastry flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, three teaspoonfuls of sugar; beat the yolks of two eggs until thick and light, add to the first mixture, with three tablespoonfuls of melted butter and one cupful of milk; beat until smooth, cut and fold in the whites of the eggs, beaten stiff and dry. Spread the mixture in a buttered shallow pan to the depth of an inch. Pare, core and cut apples in eighths to cover the top, pressing the sharp edges into the batter in rows. Sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar and bake in a hot oven. Serve hot with lemon sauce.

Meat Croquettes.—Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, add four tablespoonfuls of flour and mix well; cook with one teaspoonful of salt. Add one cupful of beef stock, one cupful of chopped meat, one tablespoonful of chopped onion, and two tablespoonfuls of chopped pimientos. Cool and shape, roll in egg and toasted crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Some Aspects of the Farmers' Problems

By BERNARD M. BARUCH

(Reprinted from Atlantic Monthly)

An ancient evil, and a persistent one, is the undergrading of farm products, with the result that what the farmers sell as of one quality is resold as of a higher. That this sort of chicanery should persist on any important scale in these days of business integrity would seem almost incredible, but there is much evidence that it does so persist. Even as I write, the newspapers announce the suspension of several firms from the New York Produce Exchange for exporting to Germany as No. 2 wheat a whole shipload of grossly inferior wheat mixed with oats, chaff and the like.

Another evil is that of inaccurate weighing of farm products, which, it is charged, is sometimes a matter of dishonest intention and sometimes of protective policy on the part of the local buyer, who fears that he may "weigh out" more than he "weighs in."

A greater grievance is that at present the field farmer has little or no control over the time and conditions of marketing his products, with the result that he is often underpaid for his products and usually overcharged for marketing service. The difference between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays often exceeds all possibility of justification. To cite a single illustration: Last year, according to figures attested by the railways and the growers, Georgia watermelon-raisers received on the average 7.5 cents for a melon, the railroads got 12.7 cents for carrying it to Baltimore and the consumer paid one dollar, leaving 79.8 cents for the service of marketing and its risks, as against 20.2 cents for growing and transporting. The hard annals of farm-life are replete with such commentaries on the crudeness of present practices.

Nature prescribes that the farmer's "goods" must be finished within two or three months of the year, while financial and storage limitations generally compel him to sell them at the same time. As a rule, other industries are in a continuous process of finishing goods for the markets; they distribute as they produce, and they can curtail production without too great injury to themselves or the community; but if the farmer restricts his output, it is with disastrous consequences, both to himself and to the community.

The average farmer is busy with production for the major part of the year, and has nothing to sell. The bulk of his output comes on the market at once. Because of lack of storage facilities and of financial support, the farmer cannot carry his goods through the year and dispose of them as they are currently needed. In the great majority of cases, farmers have to entrust storage—in warehouses and elevators—and the financial carrying of their products to others.

Farm products are generally marketed at a time when there is a congestion of both transportation and finance—when cars and money are scarce. The outcome, in many instances, is that the farmers not only sell under pressure, and therefore at a disadvantage, but are compelled to take further reductions in net returns, in order to meet the charges for the service of storing, transporting, financing, and ultimate marketing—which charges they claim, are often excessive, bear heavily on both consumer and producer, and are under the control of those performing the services. It is true that they are relieved of the risks of a changing market by selling at once; but they are quite willing to take the unfavorable chance, if the favorable one also is theirs and they can retain for themselves a part of the service charges that are uniform, in good years and bad, with high prices and low.

While, in the main, the farmer must sell, regardless of market conditions, at the time of the maturity of crops, he cannot suspend production at will. He must go on producing if he is to go on living, and if the world is to exist. The most he can do is to curtail production a little or alter its form, and that—because he is in the dark as to the probable demand for his goods—may be only to jump from the frying pan into the fire, taking the consumer with him.

Even the dairy farmers, whose output is not seasonal, complain that they are at a disadvantage in the marketing of their products.

Now that the farmers are stirring, thinking, and uniting as never before to eradicate these inequalities, they are subjected to stern economic lectures, and are met with the accusation that they are demanding, and are the recipients of, special privileges. Let us see what privileges the government has conferred on the farmer. Much has been made of Section 8 of the Clayton Anti-Trust Act, which purported to permit them to combine with immunity, under certain conditions. Admitting that, nominally, this exemption was in the nature of a special privilege, though I think it was so in appearance rather than in fact,—we find that the courts have nullified it by judicial interpretation. Why should not the farmers be permitted to accomplish by co-operative methods what other businesses are already doing by co-operation in the form of incorporation? If it be proper for men to form, by fusion of existing corporations or otherwise, a corporation that controls the entire production of a commodity, or a large part of it, why is it not proper for a group of farmers to unite for the marketing of their common products, either in one or in several selling agencies? Why should it be right for a hundred thousand corporate shareholders to direct 25 or 30 or 40 per cent of an industry, and wrong for a hundred thousand co-operative farmers to control a no larger proportion of the wheat crop, or cotton, or any other product?

The Department of Agriculture is often spoken of as a special concession to the farmers, but in its commercial results, it is of as much benefit to the buyers and consumers of agricultural products as to the producers, or even more. I do not suppose that anyone opposes the benefits that the farmers derive from the educational and research work of the department, or the help that it gives them in working out improved cultural methods and practices, in developing better yielding varieties through breeding and selection, in introducing new varieties from remote parts of the world and adapting them to our climate and economic condition, and in devising practical measures for the elimination or control of dangerous and destructive animal and plant diseases, insect pests, and the like. All these things manifestly tend to stimulate and enlarge production, and their general beneficial effects are obvious.

Nuts in Immense Quantities.
On the north coast of Guatemala 50,000 tons of cohune nuts are said to be available for exportation annually, and with an expenditure of $10,000 for highway improvement this quantity could probably be increased to 100,000 tons per annum. On the Pacific or south coast the yield of coco nuts, it is estimated, could easily be increased to 300,000 tons per annum. There is a supply of cheap labor in this southern region.

Funeral services were held at the Manhattan Evangelical Lutheran church. Burial took place Friday at 11 o'clock from the home of Henry Lehnert to Pleasant Hill Cemetery, Frankfort.

She had been a resident of Green Garden a good many years, living on a farm in section 31. After retiring, she and her husband moved to Frankfort, where they resided until the death of her husband about ten years ago, when she made her home with her daughter in Manhattan. She is survived by one daughter. She reached the age of 82 years.

Raymond Barry, 14 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Barry of Green Garden, residing on the old Wm. Lembke farm, died February 2, five hours after returning from school, suffering from a strange sickness diagnosed by Dr. Hedges as sleeping sickness. The boy appeared in normal health when he started for school. Enroute he became ill and when he reached school was sent home. His sickness grew worse and Dr. Hedges was summoned. The child sank into a state of semi-consciousness, from which he never recovered. He died five hours later. Funeral was held Saturday morning at the home of his parents. Burial at Manhattan cemetery. THE DOUR SCOT.

Synopsis.—Jane Harding, respectable and conservative old spinster—but never too old to think of marriage—with more money than brains, is inveigled by a strong-minded spinster, Miss Higglesby-Browne into financing an expedition to hunt for buried treasure on Leeward island. Her niece, Virginia Harding, undertaking to stop her, gets on the vessel engaged for the hunt, and in the confusion is unwillingly carried along. By no means concealing her distaste for the expedition and her contempt for its members, Virginia makes the acquaintance of the Honorable Cuthbert Vane.

CHAPTER III.

I Engage the Enemy.

It was fortunate that I slept well in my narrow berth on board the Rufus Smith, for the next day was one of trial. Aunt Jane had recovered what Mr. Tubbs, with deprecating coughs behind his hand, alluded to as her sea-legs, and staggered forth wanly, leaning on the arm of Miss Higglesby-Browne. Yes, of Miss Browne, while I, Aunt Jane's own niece, trotted meekly in the rear with a cushion. Already I had begun to realize how fatally I had underrated the lady of the hyphen, in imagining I had only to come and see and conquer Aunt Jane. The grim and bony one had made hay while the sun shone—while I was idling in California, and those criminally supine cousins were allowing Aunt Jane to run about New York at her own wild will. Miss Higglesby-Browne had her own collar and tag on Aunt Jane now, while she, so complete was her perversion, fairly hugged her slavery and called it freedom. Yes, she talked about her Emancipation and her Soul-force and her Individuality, prattling away like a child that has learned its lesson well.

"Mercy, aunt, what long words!" I cried gaily, sitting down beside her and patting her hand. Usually I can do anything with her when I pet her up a bit. But the eye of Miss Higglesby-Browne was on her—and Aunt Jane actually drew a little away.

"Really, Virginia," she said, feebly endeavoring to rise to the occasion as she knew Miss Browne would have her rise, "really, while it's very nice to see you and all that, still I hope you realize that I have had a—deep Soul-experience, and that I am no longer to be trifled with and—treated as if I were—amusing. I am at a loss to imagine why you came. I wrote you that I was in the company of trusted friends."

"Friends?" I echoed aggrievedly. "Friends are all very well, of course, but when you and I have just each other, aunt, I think it is unkind of you to expect me to stay thousands of miles away from you all by myself."

"But it was you who sent me to New York, and insisted on my staying there!" she cried. Evidently she had been living over her wrongs.

"Yes—but how different!" I interrupted hastily. "There were the cousins—of course I have to spare you sometimes to the rest of the family!" Aunt Jane is strong on family feeling, and frequently reproaches me with my lack of it.

But in expecting Aunt Jane to soften at this, I reckoned without Miss Higglesby-Browne. A dart from the cold gray eyes galvanized my aunt into a sudden rigid erectness.

"My dear Virginia," she said with quavering severity, "let me remind you that there are ties even dearer than those of blood—soul-affinities, you know, and—in short, in my dear friend Miss Higglesby-Browne I have met for the first time in my life with a—Sympathetic Intelligence that understands me!"

So that was Violet's line! I surveyed the Sympathetic Intelligence with a smiling interest.

"Really, how nice! And of course you feel quite sure that on your side you thoroughly understand—Miss Higglesby-Browne?"

Miss Browne's hair was rather like a clothesbrush in her mildest moods. In her rising wrath it seemed to quiver like a lion's mane.

"Jane," uttered Miss Higglesby-Browne in deep and awful tones, "do you or do you not realize how strangely prophetic were the warnings I gave you from the first—that if you revealed our plans malignant influences would be brought to bear? Be strong, Jane—cling to the Dynamic Thought!"

"I'm clinging!" sniffed Aunt Jane, dabbing away her tears. "Really, Virginia," she broke out in a whimper, "it is not kind to say, I suppose, but I would just as soon you hadn't come! Just when I was learning to expand my individuality—and then you come and somehow make it seem so much more difficult!"

I rose. "Very well, Aunt Jane," I said, coldly. "Expand all you like. When you get to the bursting point I'll do my best to save the pieces. For the present I suppose I had better leave you to company so much more favorable to your soul development!" And I walked away with my head in the air.

It was so much in the air, and the deck of the Rufus Smith was so unstable, that I fell over a coil of rope and fetched up in the arms of the Honorable Cuthbert Vane. Fortunately this occurred around the corner of the deck-house, out of sight of my aunt and Miss Browne, so the latter was unable to shed the lurid light on the episode which she doubtless would if she had seen it. Mr. Vane stood the shock well and promptly set me on my feet.

"I say!" he exclaimed sympathetically, "not hurt, are you? Beastly nuisance, you know, these ropes lying about—regular man-traps, I call 'em."

"Thanks, I'm quite all right," I said, and as I spoke two large genuine tears welled up into my eyes. I hadn't realized till I felt them smarting on my eyelids how deeply hurt I was at the unnatural behavior of Aunt Jane.

"Ah—I'm afraid you are really not quite all right!" returned the Honorable Cuthbert with profound concern. "Tell me what's the matter—please do!"

I shook my head. "It's nothing—you couldn't help me. It's just—Aunt Jane. She has let this awful Higglesby-Browne person get possession of her, body and soul."

"Oh, I say, aren't you a bit rough on Miss Browne? Thought she was a rather remarkable old party—goes in strong for intellect and all that, you know."

"That's just what fooled Aunt Jane so—but I thought a man would know better." My feathers were ruffled again.

"Well, fact is, I'm not so much up in that sort of thing myself," he admitted modestly. "Rather took her word for it and all that, you know. There's Shaw, though—cleverest chap going, I assure you. I rather fancy Miss Browne couldn't pull the wool over his eyes much."

"She evidently did, though," I said snappishly, "since he's let her rope him in for such a wild goose chase as this!"

"Oh, really, now, Miss Harding, you don't think it's that—that the thing's all moonshine?"

"Why, what else can it be?" I demanded, driven by my wrongs to the cruelty of shattering his illusions. "Who ever heard of a pirate's treasure that wasn't moonshine? The moment I had read Aunt Jane's letter telling of the perfectly absurd business she was setting out on I rushed down by the first boat. Of course I meant to take her back with me, to put a stop to all this madness; but I was too late—and you are glad of it, I dare say!"

"I can't help being glad, you know," he replied, the color rising to his ingenious cheeks. "It's so frightfully jolly having you along. Only I'm sorry you came against your will. Rather fancy you had it in your head that we were a band of cutthroats, eh? Well, the fact is I don't know much about the two chaps Miss Browne picked up, though I suspect they are a very decent sort. That odd fish, Captain Magnus, now—he was quite Miss Browne's own find, I assure you. And as to old H. H.—Tubbs, you know—Miss Browne met up with him on the boat coming down. The rum old chap got on her soft side somehow, and first thing she had appointed him secretary and treasurer—as though we were a meeting of something. Shaw was quite a bit upset about it. I say, Miss Harding, you're bound to like Shaw no end when you know him—he's such a wonderfully clever chap!"

I had no wish to blight his faith in the superlative Mr. Shaw, and said nothing. This evidently pained him, and he continued to sound the praises of his idol. It seemed that as soon as Miss Browne had beguiled Aunt Jane into financing her scheme—a feat equivalent to robbing an infant-class scholar of his Sunday school nickel—she had cast about for a worthy leader for the forthcoming Harding-Browne expedition. All the winds of fame were bearing abroad just then the name of a certain young explorer who had lately added another continent or two to the British empire. Linked with his were other names, those of fellow adventurers, which shone only less brightly than that of their chief. One Dugald Shaw had been among the great man's most trusted lieutenants, but now, on the organization of the second expedition, he was left behind in London, only half recovered of a wound received in the Antarctic. His old companions had taken again the path of glory, and were far on their way back to the ice-fields of the South pole. Only Dugald Shaw was left behind.

"And so," the even voice flowed on, "when I ran on to him in London he was feeling fearfully low, I do assure you. A chap of his sort naturally hates to think he's on the shelf."

"Well, old Shaw was fancying there was nothing for it but to go back to his place with the P. & O., which seemed a bit flat after what he'd been having, and meant he would never get beyond being the captain of a liner, and not that for a good many years to come, when a cable came from this Miss Higglesby-Browne offering him command of this expedition. As neither of us had ever heard of Miss Higglesby-Browne, we were a bit hoored for a time. But Shaw smoked a pipe on it, and then he said, 'Old chap, if they will give me my figure, I'm their man.' And I said, 'Quite so, old chap, and I'll go along, too.'

"I had to argue quite a bit, but in the end the dear old boy let me come—after wiring the pater and what not. And I do assure you, Miss Harding, it strikes me as no end of a lark—besides expecting it to put old Shaw on his feet and give us halfpals of money all round."

Well, it was a plausible story, and I had no doubt, so far as the Honorable Cuthbert was concerned, an absolutely truthful one. The beautiful youth was manifestly as guileless as a small boy playing pirate with a wooden sword. But as to Mr. Shaw, who could tell that it hadn't after all been a trumped-up affair between Miss Browne and him—that his surprise at the message was not assumed to throw dust in the eyes of his young and trusting friend? So great was my faith in Aunt Jane's gullibility, so dark my distrust of Miss Browne, that all connected with the enterprise lay under the cloud of my suspicion.

Mr. Shaw, after even a casual glimpse of him, one couldn't picture as a victim. I felt that he must have gone into the enterprise with his eyes wide open to its absurdity, and fully aware that the only gold to be won by anybody must come out of the pocket of Aunt Jane.

As these reflections passed through my mind I looked up and saw the subject of them approaching. He lifted his helmet, but met my eyes unsmilingly, with a sort of sober scrutiny. He had the tanned skin of a sailor, and brown hair cropped close and showing a trace of gray. This and a certain dour grim look he had made me at first consider him quite middle-aged, though I knew later that he was not yet thirty-five. As to the grimness, perhaps, I unwillingly conceded, part of it was due to a scar which seamed the right temple to the eyebrow, in a straight livid line.

He was welcomed by Mr. Vane with a jocular thump on the shoulder-blade, "I say, old man, Miss Harding has turned out to be the most fearful doubting Thomas—thinks the whole scheme quite mad and all that sort of thing."

"Yes, but Columbus did not inveigle a confiding old lady to go along with him."

A Conundrum.

"Father," said a little boy thoughtfully, as he watched his parent collect his notes and arrange the slides for a parish entertainment, "why is it that when you spend your holiday in the Holy land you always give lantern lecture on it? You never do when you have been to Paris!"—London Morning Post.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

KING PENGUIN'S MATE

"Some of the King Penguins," said Daddy, "had mated when they were a little younger."

One Mrs. King Penguin, who had laid an egg quite early, before the first of the year and during the latter month of the old year had her's stolen, but she was lucky enough to have laid her first egg so soon that she could lay another one and so not miss the usual yearly time about when the King Penguins hatch out their young.

"But the King Penguin I'm telling you about this time hasn't as yet picked out his mate. He knew who he wanted though."

"He went to see Miss King Penguin and he looked at her beautiful wings and gazed upon her neck and admired her plumage."

"Will you take a walk with me?" he asked. "I would like to take you to walk over upon yonder high bank which looks upon the sea."

"Mr. King Penguin was very beautiful. His plumage was fine. He was a good swimmer and he walked in a nice straight fashion as a bird of his kind should do."

"It would be nice to look out upon the sea," he went on. "I'd like to show you where we would get fine things to eat, how we could swim together under the blue, blue water. I would like you to look with me at the great and beautiful ocean out beyond."

"And Miss King Penguin slowly turned her head and looked at him and gave him the most loving of looks."

"Gladly will I walk with you," she said.

"And," he answered, "I would like you to walk more than once with me! I'd like you for my mate."

"Gladly will I be your mate," she said. And they walked away from where all their friends and neighbors were, yes, they walked away and then they talked. They didn't talk of much of anything and while it wouldn't have been of any importance to us it was of great importance to them.

"They whispered sweet speeches in each other's ears. They told each other how they loved and admired the other. They smiled and they waved their heads and they said over and over again:

"Oh, how happy, happy we are!"

"They crossed their necks then, which is something they do when they know that each cares for the other and that they are going to be loving mates. And as they walked up on top of the high bank which looked far over the sea, off by themselves, away from the eyes of curious relatives and friends they talked more and more to each other of how they loved the other and of what a beautiful world it was."

"They swayed and waved themselves from side to side and then Mr. King Penguin put his head on Miss Penguin's neck and pressed it down until it almost reached the ground."

"And he said: 'I love you so much and I try to press and press my words into you until your neck is pressed to the ground. It is my strange way of telling you how I love you.'

"And Miss King Penguin said: 'It is the strange way you may have, but it is the way that I love.'

"So these two walked together and planned together and dreamed sweet dreams of the baby Penguin which would hatch out from the egg which pretty Miss Penguin laid after she had become the mate of Mr. King Penguin. For she needed him to help her guard it and look after it and she needed him to help her bring it up to be fine and strong and penguinly, or manly!"

"And she wanted him to show the young penguin that it was not the wisest and best thing in the world for them to go with any penguin cousins of a smaller species or kind than themselves."

"And if the young penguin was a young master penguin as she hoped, she would see him grow like his father, for when he was eight months old, or so, he would be wearing his new feathers with the yellow and orange touches around the upper part of his chest and about his eyes. And his feathers would become glossy and green and his bill would be very black."

"Ah, Mr. Penguin's mate was very, very happy."

His Favorite Haircut.

"Well, my little man, how would you like your hair cut?"

"Just like my dad's, with a round hole on top."

THIN FRAIL PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE TANLAC

Hundreds of Men and Women All Over America Appear To Be Physical Wrecks Simply Because Their Systems Are Starving for Nourishment.

There are hundreds of thin, run-down, nervous men and women all over the United States who should be strong, sturdy and vigorous, with rich, red blood tingling through their veins and feeling brimful of life and energy, if they would only profit by the experience of others all over the United States and Canada, and assist nature to digest the food they eat, by simply taking Tanlac.

Millions of people have not only been relieved of the most obstinate forms of dyspepsia and indigestion by Tanlac after other remedies have failed, but large numbers of them have reported a remarkable and rapid increase in weight and a return to normal health and strength by its use.

In fact, so phenomenal have been the gains in weight by thin, frail people through the use of Tanlac that this remarkable preparation is now being proclaimed everywhere as the World's Greatest Tonic.

The food people eat does them absolutely no good unless they digest it properly. When you suffer from indigestion and other forms of stomach trouble, the food does you harm instead of good, because food which is not digested stays in the stomach and ferments, causing pains, swelling, gas on stomach, shortness of breath, bad taste in the mouth, dizziness and many other disagreeable symptoms. If this condition is permitted to run on for an indefinite period the entire system becomes saturated with poisons, the patient becomes thin and pale and in time various complications are apt to result.

Tanlac is a powerful reconstructive tonic and quickly overcomes this condition by aiding nature to eliminate the impurities from the system in a natural way and enable the vital organs to properly perform their functions. That is why it is called Nature's Medicine.

In fact, there is not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive and assimilative organs, thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the entire system. Next, it enables the weak, worn-out stomach to thoroughly digest its food and convert the nourishing elements into bone, blood and muscle. The result is you feel strong, sturdy and well with the proper amount of flesh, as Nature intended. Sold by all good druggists.

NOT A MATTER FOR POLICE

Elderly Gentleman Meant Well, but He Had Not Allowed for Possible Contingencies.

The wisest person may sometimes make a serious mistake by judging entirely by appearances, as is shown by this case.

A careless young woman, in starting to leave a car, dropped her purse. A young man, who evidently intended to leave the car at the same time, saw her drop the purse, picked it up and put it into his pocket.

But his action had not been unnoticed. Just as he stepped from the car an elderly man gripped him by the arm and whispered: "If you don't give that purse to the young lady this instant I'll expose you."

"Yes, certainly!" gasped the astonished young man. Then, with a grin, "I beg pardon, Marie; you dropped your purse."

"Oh, thank you, Harry," she replied, as she took it.

"I hope you are satisfied," said Harry, turning to the elderly man. "The lady is my sister."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Beautiful Girl Mistaken In Thinking She Had Made Impression on Attractive Stranger.

They sat together; total strangers, on the narrow seat of a Fifth avenue bus.

She was beautiful and conscious of it. And she felt his eyes upon her. She turned her lovely head and met his gaze. He was good to look upon, dark and virile, and in his clear eyes was a look of question and pleading.

She turned away, her young blood thrilling with the premonition of romance and adventure.

Again she felt his longing but hesitant gaze fixed upon her averted face. She flashed him a fleeting look of encouragement.

Emboldened, he bent toward her, his eager breath fanning her flushed cheek and whispered, hoarsely:

"Say, can't you move over, lady, and gimme some more room?"—Judge.

MAY REMODEL UNION JACK

Ireland's New Position in British Empire Likely to Bring Change in Famous Flag.

Among the lesser and more sentimental sacrifices the British feel they are making for Irish peace, there is the prospect of the changed Union Jack.

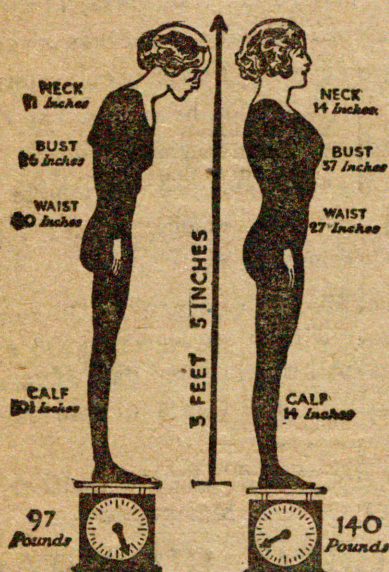

The diagonal red cross in the Union Jack stands for Ireland. The original national flag was the banner of St. George, a plain red cross on a white background. In 1606 the Scottish flag, a white diagonal cross and a blue background, was blended with the white upright cross, with a blue background of the diagonal white cross being added.

On the death of Charles I the cross of St. George again became the national flag, but in 1706, after the union with Scotland, the cross standard with the blue background was restored. In 1801 the red cross of St. Patrick was superimposed on St. Andrew's cross, making the present Union Jack.

Why does any healthy person want to be kicked into wakefulness in the morning?

Many people feel that they have to be agitated into wakefulness in the morning. They think that without the tea or coffee they take in the morning that they will not be able to meet the tasks and duties of the day.

Nothing could be more false than this reasoning. Any doctor can tell you this. For a healthy body does not require a stimulant. It gets all the stimulant it needs from food.

The thein and caffeine found in tea and coffee are irritating to the heart and nervous system. They jolt the nerves into undue activity. The result is a reaction. This is why regular tea and coffee drinkers think they must have their stimulant the first thing in the morning to wind them up for the day.

If you will stop using tea and coffee for a week, and drink

Postum, the pure cereal beverage instead, it will give Nature an opportunity to rid the system of the irritating substances that harass your nerves, upset digestion, increase your heart action, and make you nervous and irritable.

Many people who have tried Postum say that inside of a week they wake in the morning without that "all gone" feeling that they used to have, and are full of energy, strength and endurance.

Order Postum from your grocer today, and make it according to directions. Your first sip of Postum will surprise and please you.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

NEW LENOX

The first numbr of the entertainment course which the Ladies Aid society of the M. E. church are giving will be held on Friday evening Feb. 17 at the church by a former pastor Rev. J. H. Williams who will lecture on Thinker vs. Tinker. The next number will be March 3 when the Joliet High school 30 piece orchestra will deliver a splendid evening's entertainment.

On March 24 another fine treat is in store when Paul Songer of Joliet with 8 other singers will give a concert, and the last number will be after Easter and it will be a play, "The Adventures of Grandpa" rendered by the Ladies Aid. This is certainly a fine course of the very best of talent and is more than worth going a good many miles to hear. If these good things were better patronized in the rural district there would be more of them and the need of going to the cities for the same purpose would be done away with.

Fundamental Business Principles. From a purely coldblooded business point of view, honesty is the best policy. To treat the other man as you would have him treat you is an equally fundamental business principle. This does not mean that you should surrender your rights or neglect to avail yourself of your opportunities. It simply means that in the game of business, the same rules of sportsmanship should prevail as in a boxing bout, in a match of golf, or in a football game.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

MOKENA

The State of Illinois is to vote on another concrete road bond issue this year, for the purpose of building concrete tributary roads to connect up with the main trunk lines such as the Lincoln Highway, Dixie Highway, etc. Senators from every county have the privilege of designating what roads they would like to have named as tributaries to the trunk lines running through their county. Senator Barr of this district has suggested that the highway running north from Cleveland corner off the Lincoln Highway and thru Mokena be designated as a tributary road to the Lincoln Highway. This road runs through the village as the main street. It is proposed to purchase a strip of land sixty feet wide from Mokena to the Cook County line, running parallel with the Rock Island railroad, for the proposed tributary concrete highway and thus cut out all curves encountered in the present road and by making it a shorter route. This tributary would mean a direct route from Joliet to Chicago and would be much shorter than if the Lincoln Highway were used as the run to Chicago would have to be made from Matteson. It is to be hoped this proposition will carry. Cook County is building concrete roads this summer and would connect up with Will County if the road suggested were built. If this tributary is placed on the road building map it will not be built right away but would most likely be built in a year or two.
